Why Gujarat?

For well over a century, the people of Gujarat have travelled the world and to remote corners of India to explore their insatiable spirit of enterprise. Once there, they would embed themselves and create distinct sub-cultures identifying their vibrant way of life and at the turn of the millennium, the spirit of Gujarat re-engineers itself to lend fresh impetus to create new and exciting pathways of progress and development. In the cusp of tradition and culture, the state has embarked on transformational journeys in driving trade, commerce, globalization and governance.

As India gains in strength through its numbers, as well as its qualified aspirations, Gujarat looks to create an advance urban infrastructure, a liberal tax ecosystem, minimum regulation and maximum governance, which will in turn pre-empt the nation's own aspirations.

India has traditionally been a tropical hardwoods market but the trend towards use of Conifers (also known as soft woods) has been very encouraging - moving steadily northwards to have an over 35% share of the total wood being imported into India today as against under 10% less than 5 years ago.

Similarly India has traditionally been a log importing country, with duty structure in its favour 5% as against 15% levied on import of lumber, however the market is waking up to the benefits of importing lumber Vs logs, especially the manufacturers and architect's community because of it providing predictability on what to expect, since the lumber can be graded, sized and seasoned consistently. The share of lumber has increased from 2% to over 10% in the last 3-4 years. Awareness about the benefits of lumber over logs is limited, which requires persistent efforts, time and expense to spread the advantages, FII is doing its bit.

Market needs massive education on soft wood species (they are not just Pine), their properties & application - FII (Canadian Wood) is doing its bit to impart the same.

Availability of tropical hardwoods is going to be increasingly tightened due to better control on illegal harvesting and ban on export of logs from traditional sources.

India has been a fibre deficit country for many years and its demand for wood is bound to grow further due to its robust economic progress, heightened activity in the infrastructure sector and increasing affluence of its middle class – thus India needs long term sustainable sources of wood to meet its domestic demand.

Canada is positioned well to meet this demand as a leader in sustainable forest management practices -it has over 10% of the world's total forest cover and nil deforestation for over 2 decades. 100% of Canada's lumber exported is certified by independent international agencies such as PEFC & FSC etc.
